It's been business-as-usual at Microsoft even since the trial began. Does the penalty imposed on Microsoft indicate a specific date when they must begin complying with the law, or is it some kind of wink-wink-nudge arrangement?

Microsoft was developing Windows XP during the trial. That development included the commission of the same anti-competitive practices that brought Microsoft to trial in the first place. Why is allowed to sell this product?

I'll have to wrap up this email now; Windows is about to crash on me again. I guess I'd better get used to it. I'll close with a thank you to the DOJ for wasting an enormous amount of money to give Microsoft a slap on the wrist.
